I suggest that you inform Slater that his comments will be considered along with all other scoping comments received. Then send the letter from Slater and its attachments to the grantee (if they don't have them already) and tell the grantee to include the Slater comments with the other scoping comments received. Suggest that a scoping report be prepared at the end of scoping that (a) discusses any comments received on the purpose and need and articulates the final purpose and need; (b) discusses any comments received on alternatives and indicates the alternatives to be further developed and evaluated in detail; and (c) discusses any comments received on impact issues and states what evaluations will be performed in response and, if any methodological issues were raised, the methods proposed to be used in evaluating the impact in question.
